Swiss Army Man

Tuesday, September 13

Swiss Army Man

Directed by Daniel Scheinert and Daniel Kwan, drama/comedy, 97 minutes, USA, 2016

Being stranded on a deserted island leaves young Hank (Paul Dano) bored, lonely, and without hope. As a rope hangs around his neck, Hank prepares to end it all, until he suddenly spots a man (Daniel Radcliffe) lying by the shore. Unfortunately, he is dead and quite flatulent. Using the gassy body to his advantage, Hank miraculously makes it back to the mainland. However, he now finds himself lost in the wilderness, and dragging the talking corpse named Manny along for the adventure. Discussion with filmmakers and alumni Daniel Scheinert '09 and Daniel Kwan '10 to follow.

About the "F-Rating"

The F-rating was founded by Holly Tarquini at Bath Film Festival 2014, where she wanted to highlight films that feature prominent women both behind the camera and in front of it. Every film that ticks "yes" to the one of the following questions receives the F-rating of approval: (1) Does it have a female director? (2) Is it written by a woman? (3) Is/are there complex female characters on screen who exist in their own right (not simply there to support to the male lead)? The F stands for feminist. Feminism is: "The belief that men and women should have equal rights and opportunities." We believe that feminism benefits everyone. ### Where to Invade Next

To show what the USA can learn from rest of the world, director Michael Moore playfully visits various nations in Europe and Africa as a one-man “invader” to take their ideas and practices for America. Whether it is Italy with its generous vacation time allotments, France with its gourmet school lunches, Germany with its industrial policy, Norway with its prison system, Tunisia with its strongly progressive women’s policy, or Iceland with its strong female presence in government and business, among others, Moore discovers there is much that American should emulate. Norman Lear: Just Another Version of You

Tuesday, October 11

Norman Lear: Just Another Version of You

Directed by Heidi Ewing and Rachel Grady, documentary, 91 minutes, USA, 2016

Arguably the most influential creator, writer, and producer in the history of television,

Norman Lear brought primetime into step with the times. Using comedy and indelible characters, his legendary 1970s shows such as All in the Family, Maude, Good Times, and The Jeffersons boldly cracked open dialogue and shifted the national consciousness, injecting enlightened humanism into sociopolitical debates on race, class, creed, and feminism. The Witch

Directed by Robert Eggers, horror, 92 minutes, USA, 2015

In 1630 New England, panic and despair envelops a farmer (Ralph Ineson), his wife (Kate Dickie), and four of their children when youngest son Samuel suddenly vanishes. The family blames Thomasin (Anya Taylor-Joy), the eldest daughter who was watching the boy at the time of his disappearance. With suspicion and paranoia mounting, twin siblings Mercy (Ellie Grainger) and Jonas (Lucas Dawson) suspect Thomasin of witchcraft, testing the clan's faith, loyalty, and love for one another. ### The Occupation of the American Mind

Co-presented with the Boston Palestine Film Festival
Directed by Loretta Alper and Jeremy Earp, documentary, 82 minutes USA, 2016

Israel's ongoing military occupation of Palestinian territory and repeated invasions of the Gaza Strip have triggered a fierce backlash against Israeli policies virtually everywhere in the world—except the United States. The Occupation of the American Mind takes an eye-opening look at this critical exception, zeroing in on pro-Israel public relations efforts within the United States. Narrated by Roger Waters and featuring leading observers of the Israeli-Palestinian conflict and U.S. media culture, the film explores how the Israeli government, the U.S. government, and the pro-Israel lobby have joined forces, often with very different motives, to shape American media coverage of the conflict in Israel's favor. From the U.S.-based public relations campaigns that emerged in the 1980s to today, the film provides a sweeping analysis of Israel's decades-long battle for the hearts, minds, and tax dollars of the American people in the face of widening international condemnation of its increasingly right-wing policies. Discussion with filmmakers to follow.

Trapped

Directed by Dawn Porter, documentary, 90 minutes, USA, 2016

From 2011 to 2013, hundreds of regulations were passed restricting access to abortion in America. Reproductive rights advocates refer to these as "TRAP" laws, or Targeted Regulation of Abortion Providers. While these laws have been enacted in 11 states, Southern clinics in particular have been hit hardest and are now in a fight for survival.

Trapped

Trapped interweaves the personal stories behind these regulatory battles: from the physician who crisscrosses the country ensuring medical services are available, to the strong women and men who run the clinics, to the lawyers leading the legal charge to eliminate these laws, to the women they are all determined to help. In this feature-length character-driven film, our main characters fight alongside a dedicated cadre of attorneys to preserve abortion rights in a country living with the mistaken belief that Roe v. Wade still protects a woman's right to choose. Discussion with director Dawn Porter to follow.

Green Room

Directed by Jeremy Sauliner, thriller, 95 minutes, USA, 2015

Down-on-their-luck punk rockers The Ain't Rights are finishing up a long and unsuccessful tour and are about to call it quits when they get an unexpected booking at an isolated, run-down club deep in the backwoods of Oregon. What seems merely to be a third-rate gig escalates into something much more sinister when they witness an act of violence backstage that they weren't meant to see. Now trapped backstage, they must face off against the club's depraved owner, Darcy Banker (Patrick Stewart), a man who will do anything to protect the secrets of his nefarious enterprise. But while Darcy and his henchmen think the band will be easy to get rid of, The Ain't Rights prove themselves much more cunning and capable than anyone expected, turning the tables on their unsuspecting captors and setting the stage for the ultimate life-or-death showdown. Discussion led by VMA Associate Professor Jean Stawarz to follow. F

Do Not Resist

Directed by Craig Atkinson, documentary, 70 minutes, USA, 2016

Do Not Resist is an urgent and powerful exploration of the rapid militarization of the police in the United States. Opening with shocking on-the-scene footage in Ferguson, Missouri, the film then broadens its scope to present scenes from across the country—a conference presentation where the value of high-end weapons technologies is presented to potential police buyers, a community that has just received its very own military-grade tank, and a SWAT team arriving at a home to execute a warrant. The cumulative effect of these vignettes

The Dying of the Light

Directed by Peter Flynn, documentary, 95 minutes, USA, 2015

Largely unchanged for more than a century, the projection of photochemical film faces an uncertain future in the digital age. The practice of handing and projecting film is in danger of being lost, and the role of film projectionist is nearing extinction. The Dying of the Light explores the history and craft of motion picture presentation through the lives and stories of the last generation of career projectionists. By turns humorous and melancholic, their candid reflections on life in the booth reveal a world that has largely gone unnoticed and is now at an end. The result is a loving tribute to the art and romance of the movies—and to the unseen people who brought the light to our screens. Discussion with director and VMA Senior Scholar-in-Residence Peter Flynn to follow. EC

bright lights
series

The Bright Lights screening and talk series is sponsored by the Department of Visual and Media Arts at Emerson College. The mission of the series is to provide engaging visual media-related events to the Emerson College community as well as the wider Boston community. These events range from screening of student, faculty, and alumni work to the work of local, national, and international artists as well as demonstrations, lectures, discussions, and presentations by industry professionals. Bright Lights seeks to create an environment where visual media is not only viewed and appreciated but also where a dialogue is fostered and a community of media makers, academics, and aficionados are engaged and supported. Screenings take place every Tuesday and Thursday when the College is in session and are free and open to the public.
