By Federico Garcia Lorca
Directed by Damon Krometis
Greene Theatre
Nov 10-13, 2016

Description:

Following the death of her husband, aging matriarch Bernarda Alba imposes eight years of cloistered mourning on her five unmarried daughters. Behind the house's barred windows and away from their mother's prying eyes, the five imprisoned women violently yearn for freedom, which they project onto a young and duplicitous suitor. As Bernarda holds an iron grip on her children, a storm of secret desires threatens to tear this house to the ground. Written mere months before his assassination by the Fascists during the Spanish Civil War, Lorca's final masterpiece explores the dangers of intolerance and authoritarian rule, in a form simultaneously domestic and mythic.
