PERFORMANCE SUMMARY

We had a wonderful final performance! Our audience was small, but mighty and a great group for us to present our final show to. The cast was very high energy and no sections were missed or skipped. The audience really enjoyed the Devout Woman's sassy moments, particularly "You don't look so young," her swimming pool bit, and the section about the Czars and Christ being "very close." As expected Putin was well received laugh-wise from carpet walk to birth, particularly during the most raucous rendition of Blueberry Hill yet. Other memorable lines were Sergey's "X-ray," and Masha's "You just said my name." The audience responded with loud applause after the closing statements, and Sarah our audience member was the most boring we've had yet. Overall a great ending to a great process! Thank you to all who helped us achieve this!

GENERAL NOTES

Thank you all for a wonderful run!!

SCENIC NOTES

1. No notes! Thank you for a great run!

PROP NOTES

1. One of our actors dropped one of the shot glasses during Blueberry Hill, luckily they're plastic, so no harm no foul.

COSTUME NOTES

1. Lily's peasant skirt ripped as she stood up.
2. Putin's bottom button was not snapped during the angry baby moment, he remedied this by his next entrance.

LIGHTING NOTES

1. The two cue lights backstage stopped working halfway through the show. Caitlyn, being awesome, took the cue at the right time regardless and informed me of this afterwards. We proceeded to use verbal cues for the opening of the door.

SOUND NOTES

1. No notes! Thank you for a great run!

VOCAL COACHING

1. No notes! Thank you for a great run!

DRAMATURGY NOTES

1. No notes! Thank you for a great run!

PRODUCTION MANAGEMENT NOTES

1. No notes! Thank you for a great run!
